

Lisa Morrise:

Lisa Morrise graduated from the University of Kansas with Bachelor of Science, Journalism and Master of Arts, Radio-TV-Film Management degrees. She was named both the Outstanding Broadcasting Student of the year at K.U. and the Harold B. Fellows Memorial Scholarship recipient (outstanding broadcasting student nationally) by the National Association of Broadcasters. Lisa worked professionally as an on-air announcer, research-promotion-marketing specialist, account executive (for KSL-AM) and broadcast management consultant. She has taught Radio Programming, Communications, Public Speaking, and Consumer Behavior as an Adjunct Professor and currently teaches Media Management for Brigham Young University.

Lisa became involved in healthcare advocacy after having three children with special needs, including her daughter who was born unable to breathe or swallow. For the last twenty years Lisa has lobbied locally and nationally for healthcare related issues. She has advocated for improvement in pediatric palliative care, served on the Governing Board of the local early intervention program, and served on the Primary Children's Hospital Family Advisory Council. As Patient and Family Centered Care Coordinator for Primary Children's, Lisa co-facilitated the Family Advisory Council and coordinated family member advisors in various positions throughout the hospital. Lisa currently serves as the Patient Co-Lead on the Patient and Family Affinity Group for the CMMI National Partnership for Patients. Lisa has also served in the Salt Lake community as a member of the Junior League, a member of the Primary Children's Hospital Festival of Trees Board, a local and district PTA President, a member of former Utah First Lady Mary Kaye Huntsman's Power In You committee, a Precinct Chairperson, and a candidate for State Representative. Lisa tries to keep track of her three children, one of whom has graduated and two who are currently in college.
